June Newsletter 2025*

Hello Everyone,

Welcome to June! I'm happy to report that most of my garden is planted, and now it's mostly in the hands of Mother Nature to do her thing (with a little help from me.) I'm hoping that a few months from now I can complain that I have more tomatoes than I can handle. I have to admit that this time of year I am often torn between using my spare time to do gardening stuff or to paint, but at the end of the day, I'm just thankful I have the spare time that creates such a quandary.

Our May members meeting featured a demo by the inimitable Dan Knepper - it was enthusiastic, insightful and at times comedic! Dan is such an accomplished and experienced artist, and it was a treat to hear his stories and learn of not just his technical technique for watercolor, but his thoughts and theories on the art business in general. Our next meeting will be on June 17th, and will feature WOWS member and award-winning artist Rhonda Sloan as she leads us through a demonstration on painting a farm scene. As one who often paints rural landscapes, I'm excited to see what tips, techniques and knowledge she can offer us.

Since our last newsletter, the Spring WOWS Fine Art Show has gone up and is on display at the Tipp Center in Tipp City. The show is a bit smaller than in the past, but the quality of work is outstanding. If you haven't seen it yet, you have until June 15th to check it out. See the News section below for results of the judging.

I'll wrap this up by inviting you to a little different activity for WOWS: we'll be joining some of the Dayton Area Plein Air painters at Wegerzyn Gardens on Thursday, June 5th from 9am - 1pm. I've found that painting outdoors opens up a whole new experience in the way I create a painting, and I encourage experienced plein air painters or newbies to join us Thursday. At the moment, the weather is looking iffy, so let's hope it cooperates...

*Cheers,
Tessa*

WOWS Member Connie Gifford invited to give demo at Beaver Creek Library

Connie S. Gifford will be the demonstration artist on Saturday, June 7, from 1:00–2:00 pm at the Carol Graff Beaver Creek Community Library, located at 3618 Dayton-Xenia Road, Beaver Creek, OH 45432. During the demo, Connie will use a limited watercolor palette to paint a colorful sunflower. The library's summer of fun theme is "Color Our World." During the month of June, Connie will have several of her watercolors on display in the Media room of the library. Access the library website link for this program here.

Artist Demonstration

On June 17th at our WOWS meeting, join Rhonda Sloan for a watercolor demo focused on capturing the rustic beauty of barns, farm scenes, and cows. With an emphasis on creating atmosphere, Rhonda will demonstrate how to use soft washes, muted color, and selective detail to bring mood and storytelling into rural landscapes. Learn how to suggest weathered wood, open fields, and the gentle presence of grazing cows—all without overworking the scene. Rhonda's loose, expressive technique allows the subject to breathe, inviting the viewer into a peaceful, familiar setting full of charm and character.

See the WOWS website's "Programs" page here (and scroll to bottom) for more details about Rhonda, and images of her and her artwork.
